My work has appeared in many books, magazines, and newspapers, including The New York Times, The Wall Street Journal, Saveur, Food & Wine, Gourmet, The National Lampoon, BBC Science, and The Wall Street Journal, where I am a frequent book reviewer.

I am a member of the National Association of Science Writers, founder of Slow Food Western Slope in Western Colorado, and former president of the New York Mycological Society, I have lectured widely in venues like the Denver Botanical Garden, the Rueben Museum, and the New York Public Library, judged food and wine competitions and, been on TV, radio, and podcasts many times. I regularly speak at mushroom club events and mushroom festivals (my people). I am a member of the faculty at the New York Botanical Garden where I teach classes on mycophagy and psychedelic mushrooms.

I have won or been nominated for a variety of awards. At Mesa's Edge was nominated for a Colorado Book Award. Well-Preserved was nominated for a James Beard award, and was on many Best Cookbooks of 2009 lists. Mycophilia: Revelations from the Weird World of Mushrooms, was on Amazon's best science books of 2011 list and nominated for a Council on Botanical and Horticultural Libraries award. The Kitchen Ecosystem was nominated for a Books for a Better Life award and was on many Best Cookbooks of 2014 lists. Fantastic Fungi Community Cookbook won a Nautilus Award.

My writing and recipes have been anthologized in a number of publications, including Best food Writing, Saver Cooks, America, The Cookbook, and The Food & Wine Cookbook, among others.

I am featured in the documentary directed by Louie Schwartzberg, Fantastic Fungi (2019), as well as smaller docs, and in the Netflix children's show about food, Waffles + Mochi (the mushroom episode) produced by Michele Obama's Higher Ground Productions.
